"Slow Down, Move Over"

THE LAW: "Slow Down, Move Over" does just what the law says: it requires motorists approaching a roadside emergency assistance situation to move to the next adjacent lane if possible. If not, the law compels drivers to reduce their speed when passing the emergency scene.

WHY THE LAW? Every year, dozens of first responders and tow truck drivers are injured and killed on the nation's highways when passing motorists come too close-sometimes fatally close. "Slow Down, Move Over" provides our dedicated roadside emergency workers with a wider--and potentially life-saving--margin of safety.

WHEN WAS IT PASSED? "Slow Down, Move Over" went into effect in Massachusetts March 22, 2009.

WHAT VEHICLES ARE INCLUDED? All emergency vehicles displaying flashing lights: police and fire trucks and vehicles, EMS vehicles, tow trucks, transporter trucks, and roadside assistance vehicles.

WHAT ARE THE PENALTIES? Massachusetts motorists can be fined up to $100.00 for a violation of the law.
